

Food Planet – What on earth is this about?

We know we love food! And we want to make sure that with FoodPlanet you get to know all about the traditional food and drink across the globe! FoodPlanet is a game developed as part of the Europeana Food and Drink project <http://foodanddrinkeurope.eu>. Co funded by the European Commission within the ICT Policy Support Programme.

The concept is simple: Food Planet is a free and addictive app where you will challenge other players to guess the country of origin of different foods, drinks, utensils, machinery or ingredients. It's a great way of widening your knowledge about different countries and their typical dishes. The game can be played by any player of any age, and if you think it's easy, try guessing where 'Placki Ziemniaczane' or 'Bigilla' comes from!

This social game developed by the Maltese partner AcrossLimits Ltd is available for download on Android, iOS Devices and Windows Phones. If you wish you can also access this game from your computer by visiting the official Facebook page or the project website. We urge you to keep an eye on the official Facebook page as a number of competitions with very cool prizes will be announced in the month of April and May!

Being a fun yet an educational game, you will be able to have access to:

- Traditional recipes.
- Fun and interesting facts.
- Reward players with many achievements and unlocking of different badges.
- Leaderboards that refreshes every week with a chance to win prizes.
- Share and upload your favourite traditional dishes from across the world!
- Two play mode: guest mode or full-view mode.

The game contains a collection of content that can be found on the Europeana Portal (www.europeana.eu). Europeana is a multi-lingual online collection of digitized items from European museums, libraries, archives and multi-media collections, with procedures for content providers aimed at keeping our digital heritage alive. The social game is just one of the many exciting products from the Europeana Food and Drink project which is funded by the European Union.

Indulge in the fun!
